

Antique Boat Museum's 60th Annual

ANTIQUE BOAT SHOW & AUCTION

August 2-4, 2024

Clayton, New York

CELEBRATING 60 YEARS OF BOAT SHOWS

This issue is dedicated to Harold Johnson, for years of the Watertown Daily Times supporting the Boat Show Program.

Welcome!

May this 60th Annual Boat Show bring you a special camaraderie with others and much of the same joys and emotions of a big family visit.

The Annual Antique Boat Show is a bit like having a big crowd of family visit you. They descend upon you for a couple days once a year and your whole routine is turned upside down, but you wouldn't change it for the world. There is major anticipation to welcome them, hoping the weather holds and is perfect, while keenly wanting the activities you've planned to be well received and appreciated. And, at the end of the visit wanting everyone to have made new and happy memories, and to be already looking forward to next year's visit.

Like that annual family visit, seeing friends and boating family that you haven't seen in a while is always a treat. In fact, it really is the people who make the show. Sure, it's not a boat show without the boats and motors, outboards and displays, but the people are what make Boat Show the special event it is.

Whether you are a long-time member or a first-time tourist, the experience you have at the Museum is one the full Board and Staff Team are always trying to make unique, special, memorable, and most importantly, educational. On that note, we are proud to be offering more sailing classes for both youth and adults, and more Boatyard workshops from bronze casting to lofting. Museum events continue to evolve and develop as new and different ideas are introduced. Collections care and maintenance is ever critical and highly prioritized. And, we do all of this while keeping a sharp eye on the financial health of the operation.

May this 60th Annual Boat Show bring you a special camaraderie with others and much of the same joys and emotions of a big family visit.

Happy Boating and be well!

Boat Show Remembrances

by Rick and Wendy Fetridge

Reprinted from the 2014 Gazette Annual

Clayton and the Museum are for me like some people feel about their college – the people and memories are part of me and have helped to shape who I am. A visit to Clayton is like the Christmas card sent once a year, a chance to stay in touch and remember old friends and past times.

My feelings aren't just about the Museum but about the whole town and community:

“I remember how badly we felt when McCormick's burned and the loss of life; feeling badly about Mr. Bradley, who was always a fun loving man the weekend of the show (we particularly loved his cigarettes in his socks); Mrs. Haxall in her dresses and headbands ordering the boys around on where to place her boats; Bolling Haxall, larger than life in his Panama hat and blazers; how intimidated I was at first by Doc Heady in his blazer and wool trousers - only to learn later what a teddy bear he was; Tommy and his Corgis; being told to stay clean as we crawled between the boats displayed on old tires in the corrugated metal building, only to turn up later, more than slightly smudged; Danny Sutherland (aka baby Jesus) and his band of ballast boys; the Flox and Mandalay having parties on the dock with dingys acting as coolers; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and Cedric - Cedric would be in a white shirt and shorts with a smile as wide and white as his shirt; Tony racing Riot and her wig and kerchief blowing off; John Hawkinson the original Hawkeye with his Packard truck pulling up on the street as the show's first flea market - I still have a black and white photo he took of me in costume at one of the early shows when all we had was a dispro and an Old Town canoe; Tish and Blair arriving on the scene and soon becoming additional members of our family - measuring how much I had grown in a year based upon if I was taller than Mrs. Gray yet; going to the fireman's carnival and winning goldfish which we had to keep in the motel ice bucket; Joy, Jeff, and Elizabeth showing their beautiful guideboat and knowing I wanted one; the owners of the Fawn always dressed up and his brother showing a boat called Old Joe; Cleo Dodge coming in from the Island with Wild Goose and all of us envying having a boat that fancy; or Bob Cox and Suwanee he would bring her into the dock like he was parking a car; George Morse and his boys and Millie on the Tydamar; as kids we wandered all over town unsupervised and no one got into mischief (except the adults) and no one worried about us, We would go to the Golden Anchor and eat pizza, drink pitchers of root beer and watch the freighters go by; the crazy shopping cart races (the adults idea of fun);

Tish and Blair cooking breakfast for the exhibitors on the museum grounds (it almost made it worth getting up to help polish brass); all the museum volunteers that remembered us from year to year so it never mattered if we wore our pins to show we were ok to let in; the volunteer ladies in their old bathing suits; everyone always willing to help whether it was working on someone's engine, using the tractor to pull a boat out at the ramp. When we return to Clayton now we share cookies and music and stories about the past - about our boats, our lives or a salute to those that have gone before us. Rick and I have enjoyed being ambassadors for the hobby and sharing antique boats and their stories with anyone who is interested."

Boat Shows: A Family Tradition

by Caitlin Playle, Curator/Collections Manager

For some families like the Marsdens, Holdens, Cheneys, and Smiths, participating in the annual Antique Boat Show is a lifelong family tradition passed down through the generations. The Marsdens and Holdens have been bringing their boats to the Show since the second-ever Boat Show. The Cheneys have volunteered since the 1980s at Admissions and the Smiths have been judges, exhibitors, and hosts when Riggs Smith was the Museum's director.

A Look Back at the Haxall Building's Beginning

by Caitlin Playle, Curator/Collections Manager

As the Antique Boat Museum embarks on a building campaign for a Boatyard, we look back at the Elizabeth and Bolling Haxall Building Campaign which began 23 years ago in 2001. The Haxall Building replaced the existing Brooks and Denny Buildings which placed the museum's collections in peril due to their condition.

The project was overseen by Grater Architects and Pike Company of Rochester, New York. Local Watertown company DC Systems Inc. worked with Pike Company to self-perform much of the construction work.

One of the key purposes of the Haxall Building's construction was to provide program space for today and tomorrow. While Adam Powers, a Project Manager at DC Systems Inc., did not join the company until long after the Haxall Building project, his family has benefited from the programming made possible by the Haxall Building. Adam's daughters both participated in the 2024 Community Connections program and their projects can be seen in the Homer L. Dodge Gallery.

Adam and DC Systems Inc. Superintendent Cliff Loomis who ran the project shared the following recently: "Our crews were working onsite September 11, 2001, when the news about the terror attacks broke. I think just about everyone remembers where they were that day and for our guys they remember being on that jobsite at such a historic time in the country's history. Additionally the guys were mentioning that we had an unseasonably warm December that year.

Photos from ABM's Marion Clayton Link Archives

Our team made use of the warm weather and implemented concrete curing and protection techniques to place the floor slab for the building the week of Christmas just prior to a holiday shut down. That allowed for an overall acceleration of the project schedule by placing concrete prior to the winter shut downs.

Projects like this are highlights in our portfolio, much of the team is local not just to the “north county” but specifically to Clayton and the immediate surrounding areas. It means a great deal for our team to participate in such an interesting and architectural project that we get to see and remember right here in our own community. Recently we moved our main office building to a new location and in the process I [Adam] found an original set of prints from the project. The cover sheet is an original ammonia “blueprint” (back when they were actually blue!) . It was a little torn here or there from actually being used on site but I [Adam] felt like that only gave it character. We took the cover sheet and had it framed alongside some aerial photographs of the modern day site. We love the print and have it proudly displayed in our conference room today.”

The campaign for the ABM Boatyard builds on the success of the Haxall Building’s program space to expand the program space available for Boatyard activities. The Boatyard will provide a dedicated space for professional repair of one of the most prominent collections of boats in North America, bring the authentic experience of boatbuilding to life for visitors on a larger scale, and expand the space available for ABM’s STEM programs and provide the opportunity to offer broader educational programs, seminars, and workshops with experts. ABM is building a vision for the future and the Boatyard will inspire the next generation of boatbuilders, boat owners, and educators just as the Haxall Building continues to make an impact on not just those who experience it as a visitor or program participant but also those who had a role in its’ creation.

Miss Ginny, formally Miss Masie, has spent her entire life in Clayton, New York. She was sold in 2018 and was sent to a private lake community in northern New Jersey, not used much or taken care of properly. We purchased her in 2020 and after a two-year restoration brought her back to Clayton in August of 2022 for the Museum Boat Show. 2023 will be her second show and hopefully many more.

Running Wild 1923

32' Hacker

Running Wild was commissioned by Martin Shaughnessy, an industrialist who summered in Cape Vincent. It is believed, but never actually confirmed, that Shaughnessy commissioned John L. Hacker to design a Liberty-powered triple cockpit runabout. Roy Stanley built the runabout Shaughnessy had commissioned. Running Wild possesses many characteristic Hacker styling features including her crowned decks, forward raised coaming, and original hardware. Her hull is constructed of batten seam mahogany planking fastened with copper rivets. Her Gar Wood V-12 Liberty engine puts her in the same performance class as E.J. Noble's Baby Gar Snail. In fact, Running Wild and Snail traded trophies back and forth several times.

Deck Inspection for La Duchesse

by Caitlin Playle, Curator/Collections Manager

As you explore the visiting 60+ boats and engines and ABM's exhibits during the 60th Annual Antique Boat Show, you may notice that "La Duchesse", ABM's 1903 houseboat, looks a bit like a construction zone. Preserving our cultural heritage goes beyond providing a physical facility to house cultural heritage items. The condition of every item is monitored and conservation work in the form of preservation or restoration may be determined necessary at some point. Due to "La Duchesse's" size, age, year-round presence in the water, and daily wear and tear during guided tours, she requires annual general maintenance and a different area every year or so is focused on for specific work. Past projects have included the dining room ceiling panels, stripping and repainting the entire exterior, and soft goods replacement on the dancing deck.

This spring Special Projects Supervisor Bud Gray announced that the upper bow and stern decks had rot that would need to be addressed. Bud began removing the decks in June to assess the extent of the rot. The Museum is preserving what it can and will restore the decks with new materials so they can be enjoyed for years to come.

New Exhibits 2024

Haxall Building: We invite you to explore the four exhibits which debuted this summer in the Elizabeth & Bolling Haxall Building.

Chrysler Marine Concept Artwork of Bob Adair explores the development of a boat from early concepts to cruising the water through the lens of Bob Adair's artwork. Bob Adair was one of the designers for Chrysler's boat manufacturing division in the 1970s. He and other designers created renderings and concepts to show Chrysler's executives a detailed vision of the interior and exterior designs prior to production decisions. The sixteen renderings comprising the Chrysler Marine Artwork Collection are shown alongside images and advertising material of the production models.

This exhibition is made possible by the recent donation of the Chrysler Marine Artwork Collection by the Wooden Boat Association of North Texas.

Ride the River: A Virtual Reality Experience provides the opportunity to experience Ride the River in virtual reality for anyone who can't take a seat on "Miss Thousand Islands III". This 360-virtual experience was filmed aboard "Miss Thousand Islands III" and takes you from Bartlett Point, around Picton Island, through the Narrows, and past Thousand Islands Park on the way back to the Museum. Sights along the route include Calumet Island, Maple Island, Rock Island Lighthouse, and Round Island. Support for this experience was generously provided by the Tahoe Maritime Foundation.

A Student Point of View: Artwork of the 1000 Islands from the TISCD Community Connections Program is the culmination of the 2024 Community Connections program. The overall goal of the Community Connections program is to provide place-based hands-on educational opportunities for the students in Thousand Island Central School District. Students enjoy grade-specific projects that relate directly to the history and ecology of the St. Lawrence River. As the title of the program suggests, another major component of Community Connections is to use the projects as a way to connect students with subject matter experts from a number of local organizations, museums, and universities.

Chrysler Marine Concept Artwork of Bob Adair, A Student Point of View: Artwork of the 1000 Islands from the TISCD Community Connections Program, and Ride the River: A Virtual Reality Experience can all be found on the first floor of the Haxall Building.

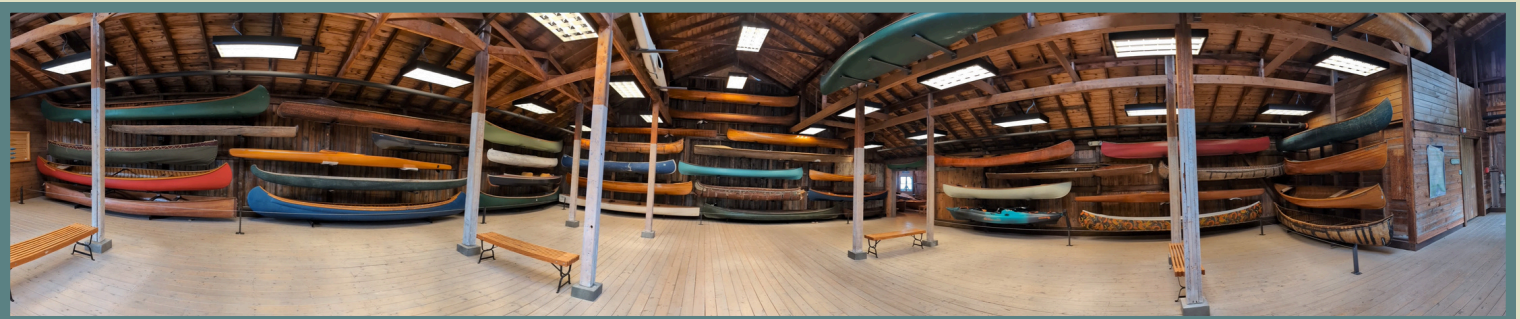

Stop by the second floor of the Haxall Building and see Blueprints from the Scripps Technical Legacy Data Collection. This exhibition of 20 blueprints from the Scripps Technical Legacy Data Collection is a glimpse into the complex engineering that goes into the engines that power boats.

Small Craft Building:

Paddlecraft: A Study Collection In 2024, the ABM decided to push the limits on the number of small craft that could be displayed in a single gallery space at one time by forming a study collection of 50+ paddlecraft and paddles.

What is a study collection? Instead of having vessels and artifacts spread out across different exhibits and storage locations, having all the artifacts in one location makes the vessels more accessible for researchers. In essence, the study collection allows for easier studies to be done.

This study collection is also the ABM's way to have a higher percentage of our collection available for the public to enjoy. Most museums have 3-10% of their collections on display while the ABM is proud to have 28% of its artifacts on display between the main campus exhibit spaces and the visible storage of the Don Doebler Collections Storage Facility located on Eastline Road.

This exhibition is made possible through the generous support of Allan Newell.

Other Exhibit Updates:

Further updates were made to Outboards! The Motor that Changed Pleasure Boating in the Cleveland E. Dodge Memorial Launch Building and St. Lawrence Skiff: Our Indigenous Watercraft in the Small Craft Building.

In Outboards!, the shop vignette has come alive with items from ABM's collection, donations from Greg Kranz and Scott Smith, and Greg's generous donation of time and his memories to create the vignette.

Take a tour of Outboards! with co-curator Peter Hunn at 2pm on Friday, August 2nd and learn about some of the motors on display from an expert.

Small artifacts and historic images were added to the St. Lawrence Skiff exhibition to further tell the story of our regional watercraft. With the generous support of the Tahoe Maritime Foundation, a touchscreen was added with video clips of Quentin Rueckert showing the different maneuvers for sailing a skiff. Currently under development for the exhibition is a supplementary story of the Gaffneys who made the exhibition and its' gallery space possible through their generous support.

2024 Builder in Residence

StanCraft launched a torpedo-shaped hull mahogany runabout in the 1950s. Over the following years the shape and length of the hull was changed. The bat wings added to the end of the hull in the 1950s are still unique for a runabout today.

The 1:6 model that is built by Julius Faubel as the 2024 Builder in Residence at ABM is not available as a kit.

The aim of the project is to show how motorboats were individually manufactured before the days of plastic and composite materials. Most of ABM's boats were built in a similarly elaborate way.

Developed jointly by two StanCraft admirers, the model also represents the special effort that was necessary for the original builder in the 1950s to get this gem on the water.

The first layer consists of thin poplar plywood, the second layer is made of mahogany, maple and wenge veneer. The seats in both cockpits are upholstered with genuine leather, the metal parts are individually made of brass, soldered, polished and chrome-plated. Up to 9 layers of 2k varnish are applied.

All parts of the Torpedo are handmade and not available as parts from the model building market. Construction time for this model is approx. 6 months, 8 hours/day, 5 days/week.
